Campus recruitment is a method where companies actively seek out and hire students from colleges for both internships and full-time positions. It's a crucial strategy for building a strong talent pipeline and fostering a connection with the next generation of professionals.

Key Activities:

❖ Campus Visits and Career Fairs:

Companies participate in career fairs and organize on-campus presentations to interact with students directly.

❖ Recruitment Events:

These include information sessions, workshops, and networking events designed to engage students and showcase company culture.

❖ Application and Screening:

Companies have a structured application process, often including online applications, resume screening, and initial interviews.

❖ Assessments and Interviews:

This stage involves various assessments (e.g., aptitude tests, technical skills tests) and interviews (both technical and behavioral) to evaluate candidates' suitability.

❖ Offer Rollout and Onboarding:

Successful candidates are offered positions, and pre-boarding and onboarding programs are used to integrate them into the organization.
